The two commands go together. You can't do one without the other. Right now, more than ever, the church needs to model what it looks like to be good neighbors. To do that, I'm convinced Christians need to build these four habits into their lives. We must get to know our neighbors individually. We can't love people we don't know.

Can we be good without God? At first the answer to this question may seem so obvious that even to pose it arouses indignation. For while those of us who are Christian theists undoubtedly find in God a source of moral strength and resolve which enables us to live lives that are better than those we should live without Him, nevertheless it would seem arrogant and ignorant to claim that those who ...
