There, Visker suggests that Heidegger never intended for fallenness to be an essential structure of Dasein. Rather, it is a mere structure of possibility which can be overcome by authentic Dasein. Visker doesn't (and can't) deny that Heidegger calls falling an existential; he just claims that it is an

Rudi Visker Meaning. Habermas warns us, should not be allowed to consume validity. 1 For once that happens the further exhaustion of the project of modernity and the loss of its nonnative content are inevitable. This is clear from the writings of those Habennas calls 'the theorists of the counter-enlightenment' - a category
