The New Scramble for Africa. The relationship between South Africa and China is central to this expansion. South Africa is now China's largest trading partner on the continent, and China has become South Africa's largest trade partner in the world. This strong economic connection has fostered close relations between the two countries.

A new scramble for Africa marks the beginning of the latest chapter in the plunder of the continent. The United States and Europe, but also rising powers like China, seek to consolidate their grip on Africa's oil, its minerals, and other resources, all worth more every day because of a massive boom in the price of oil and raw materials.

China's part in this story has loomed particularly large in recent years, and the American military footprint on the continent has also expanded. But a new scramble for resources, markets and territory is now taking place in Africa involving not just state, but non state-actors, including Islamic fundamentalist and other rebel groups.

The demand for manufactured goods, like cars and cell phones, is drying up in the occidental countries. China and Africa are the rapid-growing consumer markets. It is also estimated that Africa supplies 90% of the world's platinum and cobalt, half of its gold, two-thirds of its manganese and 35% of the world's uranium.
